Why Your Car's Cooling System Needs Care

Your vehicle's cooling system does just what you might think: it cools the engine parts that heat up as you drive. When leaks develop in your cooling system, it can be difficult to pinpoint the exact source. If it's not addressed, these leaks can cause the engine to overheat. If so, visit our quality cooling system repair shop to stop a radiator leak

Problems with the cooling system might simply need a belt adjustment or mean your car's fluids need to be flushed. In other situations, the radiator, through which the coolant fluids move, will need to be repaired or replaced.

Other Automotive Cooling Problems We Check For

Our cooling system service and car heater repair shop will check your thermostat and your coolant levels, and apply a cooling system flush where needed. Radiator stop leak scan handle basic issues if the heater core is cleaned first. (If not, a DIY effort can cause clogs.) As the fluid should run unobstructed throughout your engine system, we thoroughly check every component of your engine cooling system for debris or clogging.

We examine the water pump, heater valve, condenser, and cooling fan. We check the hoses for cracks or invisible leakage. This can easily result from regular use of a high-performance car.

So, don't wait for your luxury car engine to be compromised. Schedule preventive maintenance at iAUTOHAUS in Tempe, Arizona. Set a car care reminder. With service on a regular basis, you won't overheat or risk frozen engine fluids.

Then follow up with our coupons for engine needs, such as oil and filter changes.
